LIVING STILL

By Florence Bolding, Class of '39

(Granddaughter of William Nelson)

Old man with snowy hair and gleaming smile,
With heart as warm as June's bright sun—
When I stood on the sanded yard tonight where you have stood,
When I saw the bold, dark mountain outlined against your valley's sky,
When I smiled at stars you too have smiled upon,
When I loved white vivid clouds that floated by,
When I saw that the ring around December's moon enclosed a star that you would say will bring us rain,
When I heard from yonder woodland slopes the queer and plaintive notes of "screechy" owls you called by name—
I thought of you.

Old man whose knees I crawled upon,
Whose name my father bears,
Nearer than these golden fields you cleared of beechnut, pine, and oak,
Nearer than the moss-lined well your spade carved to the water-vein long years ago,
Nearer than this wall of sandstone rocks,
I found you.

Old man who taught me flowers and birds and trees,
Who laughed when I reached for red June apples high above my head,
Who called to me to come and chase the butterflies from rose to rose,
Who says to me now that the moss in the dooryard will bloom again and he will meet me there in the morning dew—
Old man who loves me yet, I hear you.
Old man, I still shall be your little girl.

Chapter One

INTRODUCTION

In 1835 Jonathan Lee Bolding made his mark as his signature on a deed from Daniel Durham for 209 acres of land in the eastern part of Pickens District, South Carolina. He paid $100.00 for it. This was known as the John Stuart place and was part of an original grant to Andrew Liddell in 1784.

122 years later the mark made by this one man is of far greater importance, it is the mark of influence unto the eighth generation.

This is a history of his life, as accurate as present day records can show. Of the facts written, there are none that have not been carefully traced and may be verified, unless such of these are referred to as traditional, or are the remembrances of the older generation now living.

In September 1956, descendants of this pioneer citizen of Pickens County met at Prater's Creek Baptist Church for a first reunion. So many were interested in learning more about our fore-bears that this book has been compiled for them and for future generations.

A simple farmer, not very well educated, God-fearing and hard-working, he was "the salt of the earth."

Chapter Two

EARLY ORIGIN

In all Genealogical books studied, the name of Bolding in any form of spelling is referred to as the same, and of English origin.

Twelfth Century England had Bol, Bole. Later it is written Boley, Boleyn, Bolen.

Perhaps the most famous of all persons to bear the name in any form was Anne Boleyn, one of the wives of King Henry VIII, of England, mother of Queen Elizabeth, known as the "Good Queen Bess."

Anne was the second daughter of the Earl of Wiltshire, Sir Thomas Boleyn (1477-1539).

A Dictionary of American Family Names, by Eisdien C. Smith, gives this definition of the name:

"Bolin, Bollin, Bolen, or any spelling thereof.--English, meaning dweller near the Bollin River in Cheshire, England."

England and America have many variations in the spellings.

In 1660, a 14-year-old lad by the name of Robert Bolling, (1646-1709), sailed from England to be the first immigrant of the name to come to the New World. He settled in Kippax, Prince George's County, Virginia. By 1698 he was Justice of Charles County, in 1699 he was High Sheriff, in 1702-1709 he was Surveyor, and had acquired the title of Colonel.

In 1675 Robert married Jane Rolf, daughter of Lt. Thomas Rolf, who was the son and only child of the marriage of John Rolf and the Princess Pocohantas, (later christened Lady Rebecca). The John Rolfs had gone to England where Lady Rebecca was presented to the Queen. Before the return trip, she died, leaving Thomas as a small baby.

Jane Rolf Bolling became the mother of a goodly number of children. She died and Robert married Anne Stith, a daughter of Major John Stith, and she also had several children.

From these two unions came a long line of the first families of Virginia.

John Randolph, Matthew Maury, Thomas Jefferson, and Edith Bolling Wilson are said to be of this descent.

A record of Revolutionary Soldiers of Virginia gives several pages of Bollings of different spellings, but all referred to as the same lineage.

Some of these are:

Bolling, Bollding, Bolding, Bowling, Bowlding, Boling, Bollin, Bowlen, Bolin, Bolen, Bolden, Bollen, Bowlen, Bowldin, Bolldin.

In this history there appears almost all of these spellings. One individual may have four or five in his land deeds alone. There seems to be no certain way of spelling in a family, brothers and sisters signing differently.

About 1900 the individual families of Jonathan's descendants agreed on Bolding, partly because a Virginia cousin said that was the way his family signed, and partly because they liked the sound of the d.

However, to trace it accurately in the United States, the name is B-O-L-L-I-N-G.

In copying records for this book, names have appeared as written in most instances.

(Printed here is the first verse of a poem by Charles Dibdin, an English poet born in 1745).

THE SAILOR'S CONSOLATION

One night came on a hurricane,
The sea was mountains rolling,
When Barney Buntline turned his quid,
And said to Billy Bowling:
"A strong norwester's blowing, Bill;
Hark! Don't ye hear it roar now?
Lord help 'em, how I pities all Unhappy folks on shore now!"

—(Page 58 in McGuffey's Fourth Eclectic Reader).

BOLDINGS IN EARLY SOUTH CAROLINA

In the upper part of this state in 1780, there is recorded one Samuel Bolling (Bolding, Boling) in the files of the Daughters of the American Revolution. He was a Revolutionary soldier from near Jamestown, Virginia, who came here in search of a new home. At the time, all the upper, northwestern part was known as Ninety Six District and had not long been out of the hands of the Cherokees. The very uppermost corner was still very wild and wooded. Samuel settled in what is now Laurens County.

A copy of some notes in his handwriting was found in the family Bible after his death. Because of the value and bearing they have in this history, they are copied verbatim.

"I will set downe here some facts for my children to remember.

John Bolling II and Elizabeth Blair were my ggdpts. She, daughter of Dr. Archibald Blair and Mary Wilson. One of their children was my grandfather, William, born 5 may, 1731. My mother Amelia was daughter to Richard Randolph, jr, and Ann Meade. My parents were 2nd cousins, he being 5th and she 6th in descent from Princess Pocohantas."

While it is not established that this Samuel was a close relative, the next two entries are important.

"Our family left Virginny in 1780 and settled in Laurens County. Many relatives and connections came with us, or soon thereafter."

"Rolfe and Archibald had some to come, too."

These are the first settlers of the name to come to the upper part of this state. From all references it appears that they were all from the eastern part of Virginia, especially around Jamestown.

The William mentioned above had a large family. A Virginia reference lists 19 children, with one having an Indian name, Mataoka, (which is another name for Pocohantas.)

In 1790, about the time Ninety Six District was divided and this section called Pendleton District with Greenville adjoining, a Joseph Bowlin bought land near Seneca River. Some of the deeds of that time are recorded as indentures, and were paid for by shillings. Many have the phrase, "one ear of Indian Corn to be paid as rent at the end of the year if called for." Other times, it may be written "pepper-corn." This seems to be as a measure of good faith between parties involved.

In 1798, a Joseph Bolen owned land near the Saluda River.

On the roll of Shoal Creek Church, near Fort Prince George, were the names of Edward and Seleigh Bolden in 1796, and William and Mary Bolding in 1804. (Shoal Creek is now Chauga in the present county of Oconee).

On 18 Mile Creek in 1807 a Drury and Mary Bolen (Bowlen) lived. Also, in 1808, a Thomas and Charity Bolin (Bowlin).

Over in Greenville District across the Saluda lived several of the name.

A biography of Charles D. Boling, a prominent textile executive of S. C., gives an account of several brothers coming from Roanoke County, Va., in 1818 and all settling in Greenville District except one. He went on to Georgia.

By writing to Habersham and Franklin counties in Georgia for some information, we find a fair number of the same names out there. Lands sold to Archibald, John, Richard, Samuel, William, Tully, etc. Some sold out in a few years as they did in South Carolina.

One Tully sold in Habersham and came to Pendleton District, settling down.

Chapter Four

BOLDINGS ON PEA RIDGE

This book is concerned with the Boldings who settled and built up the section in the northeastern part of Pendleton District, (a few years later to be called Pickens District, with the courthouse on Keowee River not far from where De Soto and his party crossed in their westward trek in 1540).

This particular section, called Pea Ridge, supposedly got its title from the fact that it was too poor a spot to grow anything but peas. However, it is comprised of some of the best farming lands in the state.

The census records in Washington list this as Jonathan's birthplace. His descendants have always been told that he was of Virginia parentage. Since the census records gave only the names of the heads of households until 1850, there can be no definite determining whether John or William Bolding, the two settlers from Virginia who bought land in the early beginning of the 1800's, was the father of Jonathan. However, all indication shows William to be the one. (No direct proof.)

All records concerning both are set down in full. Land deeds for this section when it was known as Ninety Six District, and partly in the hands of the Cherokees, are in Abbeville courthouse. Later deeds for Pendleton District are found in Anderson, Oconee, and Pickens courthouses. Any land deed mentioned in this book may be found at these above-mentioned places.

Seconda Baptist Church has all its old Minutes. They show that William Bolding came under the watchcare of that church in 1811, coming from a neighboring church. (The neighboring churches were Shoal Creek, Keowee, Oolenoy, Cross Roads, Salubrity, and Old Liberty in Oconee County.) William's land deed has a notation below its recording date of 1812 that it is one given in lieu of the original deed that was destroyed by fire when the house of said William Bolding was burned by fire. Jonathan was born in 1806, according to census records, so William or John, or both, were living here before buying land of their own

John Bolding bought 150 acres on Six Mile Creek from John Hellum in 1812, and 130 acres from Alec Murphree on Six Mile Creek in 1815. He sold the first part to Chris Vickery three years after buying it and the second part to Isaac Durham in 1824. There are no more available records of John Bolding, nor is his name listed on any other transaction, witness, or otherwise.

Of William Bolding, there are enough records to show quite a story. His name and Jonathan's are linked together frequently. He was a witness for Jonathan when he bought land, and so many links tie them together that all his records are set down for others to see the connection was close.

William had a good hand-writing and seemed to be well educated. A year after he had presented himself to Secona Church, he was elected church clerk. He was sent as a delegate to other churches, attended other meetings, and was often in the forefront. An interesting item shows that seven years after he had joined someone brought up the fact that "Bro. Bolden had never got his letter and that seemed a mighty long time to be under the watchcare."

A Jonathan Liverman was a friend and neighbor to William. We find their names together often. Might be where Jonathan Bolding got his name. Another neighbor was William Powell.

William's homeplace was comprised of 80 acres which he had bought from Edward Gregory on Gregory's Creek, on the road "from Secona to Keowee."

Jonathan's descendants have heard over and over that there were three boys, Jonathan, Buck, and Dyson. The latter two went to Georgia when young.

In 1822, William got into a dispute over church matters and a year later his name was dropped from the roll. At that time the churches were strong on discipline, but short on organization. All minutes were written "The church met in Peace and departed in Peace." How this was done is a mystery when hot arguments on all matters were the order of the day. Money matters, domestic matters, disputes, moral issues and public acknowledgments all show that whoever had the most on his or her side won. One man had to get up and acknowledge that he had said "he hoped to God Brother so-and so died." Another member had heard and reported it. If a man and wife had trouble, each had a chance to bring it up before the congregation to smooth it out. A record of a church near Anderson shows that a minister and pastor of that church owed a member $5.00 that he had neglected to pay. That church carried the matter to the association, it was ruled on, the pastor ousted, both from his church and the association. He was restored next year at the next meeting when it was brought up that he had paid the debt, acknowledged to the member, the church, the association, and asked their's and God's forgiveness.

Whisky making was an honorable profession. In reading all the old wills of neighbors of William and Jonathan Bolding to find the modes of life and also where their names appeared as witnesses, one neighbor had willed his daughters household furnishings, cows, hens, and land. To his only son, he had willed land, horses, and "my Whisky-St.ille."

Yet public drunkenness was looked down on, names removed from church rolls, and alcoholism, as we know it today, very scarce. Whisky was sold for a livelihood, kept for medicine, for preservative, and to offer guests, even the visiting minister.

Another neighbor of William's, Charles Durham, and from whose brother Jonathan later bought land, willed his "big Bible and large Hymn-book" to a child. John Craig had in his will that every grandchild be bought a Bible worth one dollar, with his name, the grandchild's name and the following written in the front:

"Remember Thy Creator in the Days of Thy Youth. Search the Scriptures, in Them are Words of Eternal Life."

Caleb Barton requested "one negro girl, named Jane, to be sold to pay my burial expenses."

Daniel Stephen's wife was named Morning. Other names in the locality were Keturah, Kizziah, Demaris, Lindamira, and Thursey.

These were people and times that Jonathan Bolding knew as a boy.

He married a slender, dark-eyed girl named Rebecca Powell in 1829 or 1830. She came from a Methodist family and they went to church not far from Gregory's Creek, at an old meeting-house called Twelve Mile. He was six years older than she.

It appears that William Powell was her father. (No direct proof). She had a sister, Elvina, a brother, Sampson, and possibly was a sister of Allen. The first two are remembered by living descendants but the last is from hearsay only. She was very talkative -- a trait most of her descendants inherited. Where they lived the first few years of marriage is not known. There are no available records to show, as they did not buy land for several years.

William Gilmore Simms, a contemporary of Jonathan, wrote in his South Carolina History that at that time travel was very difficult and slow. We quote:

"In the Up-Country most of the rivers had too many rapids and shoals to be useful for travel and trade. The few dirt roads were narrow and rough and nearly impassable in bad weather. From Charleston to Caesar's Head, for example, was a hard journey of two weeks."

The time Jonathan and Rebecca married was just about the same time that the first rail-road was built in South Carolina. It went from Charleston to Hamburg and carried its first passengers in December, 1830. People in the up-country heard of it and doubted it would run. Some predicted the engine would explode.

Mail was brought at irregular intervals by riders on horseback. A favorite party for the young people was a cottonseed picking party. The lady removed her shoe and her companion helped her fill it with hand picked seed. The first to finish got to lead the square dance set. Ladies with little feet were very popular. Rebecca had a little foot.

Those in the community who owned slaves carried them to church and all worship was in unison, but each church had its slave gallery or section. Twelve Mile and Secona had colored members and they were instructed and chastised the same as whites. They were buried in the same graveyards, in the family plot.

Most shoes were made at home with a pegging awl and squirrel-hide strings. Linsy-woolsey clothing, tallow candles, goose-feather pillows and beds, cornshuck and wheat straw beds, spinning, weaving, fire-place cooking. A young couple starting out in life to raise a family had the whole responsibility of supplying all needs, and a big one. And most families were big ones, too.

The year before Jonathan got married, William sold out to John Clayton. He seemed to go from bad to worse financially. In the courthouse in Pickens there is a list of the worldly goods of William Bolding in 1834. Remember, he had been burned out once and things were hard to get then. Most everything was made by hand and money scarce, especially if you were a farmer with no slaves. (There are very few Negroes with the name of Bolding in any spelling in the state of South Carolina, attesting to the fact that very few were slaveholders. Neither William nor Jonathan have any record of owning slaves). This list was evidently filed for a mortgage. Part is list. A note attached shows that part of the things were allowed his wife and children for their use. It is handwritten, and is copied verbatim for future generations to see the things necessary for living in that day.

Next year, 1835, William went to old Pickens courthouse with Jonathan to buy the land being sold by Daniel Durham. The sale was recorded by F. N. Garvin, the same man who had surveyed William's land and who also owned many acres near the place Jonathan was buying. He was called General Garvin, a Surveyor, Public Accountant, and his ledgers show many interesting items. One of his clients was John C. Calhoun.

A few months after this, William went back to Pickens with Allen and Jean Powell to buy land adjoining Jonathan and Rebecca. This was her brother (hearsay). Jonathan and Rebecca had four little children, Adaline, Melissa, John F., or T., always called Bud, and J. Matt. Land was mostly wooded, house and barns were of log and plank construction. There was a big spring at the foot of a round rise, a creek that the spring emptied into called Stewart's Creek. They planted a large apple orchard beyond the spring on a slope and cleared land on the north side of the creek. Andrew Lewis and Thornton D. Satterfield were the nearest neighbors.

Four years later Allen and Jean Powell, William Powell, and Thornton Satterfield all sold out and there are no records of any of them, with the exception of an obituary of Thornton D. Satterfield dying in White County, Ga., in 1881, found in some old papers in the trunk of one of Jonathan's children.

Rebecca Bolding had a brother who lived in the neighborhood named Sampson who was a blacksmith. He was three years younger than Rebecca. He married a girl named Jane and they had a large family. He named one of his daughters Rebecca. Samp Powell had a knack for making guns and soon became famous as a gunsmith. Guns in good working order may be found today that were made by Samp.

By 1847, Jonathan and Rebecca had 10 living children. Daniel Paine, Green B., William Nelson, George Washington, Benjamin Marcus, and Elizabeth J. had been born.

Also, in 1847 we find our last mention of William. He was arrested and carried to old Pickens courthouse, charged with forgery, assault and battery. In searching the records pertaining to these charges, they seemed to grow out of a misunderstanding regarding a gallon of whisky. He was accused of signing the name of S. H. Boggs to an order for one gallon of whisky to be bought from Riley Farmer. The assault and battery charge was for a fight William put up over the accusation. Some of the witnesses were Jane Pilgrim, Martha Boggs, A. B. Clayton. After much dispute, William spent the night of March 26, 1847, in gaol (jail). Next day Jonathan paid $50.00 to get him out of gaol. That was half as much as he had paid for his land 12 years before. William paid $100.00 to get out of it and whether he left the country, died or whatever, that is the last of him in Pickens or Pea Ridge.

Three years later, the 1850 census for the entire Pickens District, composed of the present Pickens and Oconee counties, lists ONLY the family of Jonathan Bolding to be found in any spelling of the name as living there.

Chapter Five

WAR SHADOWS

Jonathan and Rebecca Bolding had twelve living children by the end of 1850. He was 44 years old, she 38, and seemingly prosperous according to standards of an individual, non-slave-holding farmer. Real estate valued in 1835, now listed by the U. S. Census as five times more valuable.

The children named in order: Adaline, Melissa, John F. (or T.), James M., Daniel P., Green B., William N., George W., Marcus, Elizabeth Jane, Elonden Catherine, and Rebecca Susan.

There are supposed to be four infants dead. Several remember hearing that there were sixteen in all. However, census records only show living members, and the stones at the heads of all little graves in the burying-ground are unmarked, so this cannot be verified.

Schools were scarce and taught only a few weeks out of the year, being paid for out of the individual pockets of the parents. The little Webster Spelling-Book, Bible, Almanac, and copy-books were the most commonly used. Slates were used and paper scarce. Around Pendleton, not very far away but still too far to attend, were several schools teaching Latin and other advanced subjects. However, the children of Jonathan were not able to make the trip. They were taught to work, most all furniture, clothing, shoes, and tools were handmade. Matt became very good with carpentry tools. His first occupation is listed "shingle-maker." His chairs, spinning-wheels, and bedsteads are still to be found in homes. A great portion of the country was still wooded and all the boys were keen marksmen, a fact that was attested to a few years later. Game abounded, fish, and plenty of rich, new-ground to grow food, so this was a close-knit, live-at-home family.

There had been a report sent in by Elder A. Acker in 1844, a missionary from the Baptist Domestic Mission Board, that stated "this part of Pickens County was destitute, and hungry to hear the Gospel, people walking from one to ten miles to hear me preach."

His message caused the Board to send Elder Jacob Burriss to assist.

Mr. Burriss settled here. The Southern Baptist Convention had been formed in Augusta, Ga., in 1845, so the Baptist influence began to spread.

Jonathan's family were members of Twelve Mile M. E. church not many miles away and near the old brush arbor where camp meetings were held the first week in October every year. This Methodist church was supposedly organized in 1819. In the courthouse at Pickens is recorded the deed from Moses Hendricks to a Board of Trustees of Twelve Mile M. E. Church on the road from Secona to Keowee for one acre of land. He was paid one dollar. The trustees were: Charles Durham, Gideon Ellis, James Prater, John Clayton. The witnesses were Daniel Carter, Joab Hendricks, and William Hunter. The date on this deed is July 19, 1832.

So as for the "destitution" seen by the eyes of a horseback preacher, local records disagree. True, land sold for fifty cents an acre, but a Negro boy, Adam, sold for $900.00. Wagon trains of meat, whisky, lumber, and farm produce were sent to Hamburg and Augusta. So much was this trading carried out that one old lady said she was half-grown before she found "HamburgandAugusty" was more than one word. Return trips brought into the up-country things not available at local stores. Gen. Garvin's book-keeping ledgers are full of transactions of these wagon trains and their owners and drivers. (Hamburg is now North Augusta).

Foodstuffs, furniture, and clothing were made at home. Medicines, too. In an old trunk, together with a tax receipt of Jonathan's, is a most interesting recipe for chicken "vitamins." Written with a pencil on a scrap of yellowed paper:

“Equal parts of copperas, sulphur, ginger, and salts, black pepper. Give one teaspoonful of mixture in quart of meal or grits once a day for young chicks.”

The girls married young. Adaline married William Pilgrim, who lived close by. He was the son of Jefferson and Hannah Pilgrim. Melissa married a William Collins. He was not a close neighbor, several Collins families living across the river. He was tall and had a heavy shock of hair.

Bud is a mystery. Census records later show a person of the same name married to a girl named Margaret, with three little children, Rebecca, Belle, and Cook. His post office is listed Salubrity (later to be called Liberty), and since the 1860 census does not list him as living at home, this must be Bud.

Matt married a pretty girl named Nancy Vaughn. His and Jonathan's post office was listed as Wolf Creek. All settled in the near neighborhood, always in the sight of Six Mile Mountain.

Pendleton was a thriving town. Many low-country planters had homes there. So did John C. Calhoun, nearby. The threat of war was the topic of the day. Jonathan and sons went there frequently when they weren't working, or hunting, and all the unrest made them conscious of their duty.

Gen. F. N. Garvin gave his pasture to be used as a muster-ground and there the Bolding boys, along with their friends and relatives, gathered to practice war. As for the handling of rifles and guns, they were already well-schooled.

John T. (or F. or Bud) went to Pendleton and signed up for a years enlistment in Gregg's First Regiment, S. C. Infantry, on Feb. 4, 1861.

Col. James L. Orr, of Anderson, very prominent in secession, organized, outfitted and named for himself, Orr's Regiment, S. C. Volunteers. An original roster of this Regt. is in the fire proof vault at Clemson College Library.

So in April, 1861, with the fall of Fort Sumter, the family of Jonathan Bolding was being split up. The hearts of Jonathan and Rebecca were heavy. If the war lasted very long it would get all seven of their sons, two sons-in-law, nephews of Rebecca's, and sons of their friends.

Chapter Six

WAR YEARS

In 1859, a Leonard Bolding (Bowling) had moved into the part that is now Oconee County. Over near Easley were two more families of the Bolding name, one spelled Bouldin, one Bowldin. These are mentioned in order to show that there were two of the name joining the Confederacy from Pickens that were not the sons of Jonathan and could belong to one of these families. All records of the Confederate soldiers from Pickens District have been checked in the files of the War Memorial Library Archives in Columbia, in the courthouses, U.D.C. records and some from the National Archives of the War Department in Washington.

On July 11, 1861, Green and Nelson went to the courthouse and signed up under Capt. A. D. Gaillard, Co. G, 12th Regt., S. C. Infantry. Green was nearly 23, Nelse 19. They were sent to Pendleton, there to be sent on to Lightwoodknot Springs, a training camp 15 miles out from Columbia. Their orders read: "For the War now existing between the Confederate States and the United States."

They were to be known as Palmetto Sharpshooters.

Nine days after they left home, on July 20, 1861, Daniel Paine, about 25, enlisted and was put in Orr's Regiment, Co. A. They were called Keowee Riflemen. He was under Col. J. W. Livingston. All were single, strong, and all went toward the lower part of this state.

Four months later, Daniel Paine came home. The following letter, now in the possession of the Rev. Seagle N. Bolding, is self-explanatory.

Sullivan's Island,
Nov. 23rd, 1861.

My dear Sir:

It is my painful duty to inform you that your son, D. P. Bowlin, is no more. At half-past twelve o'clock last night he quietly breathed his last in our hospital.

He was taken with measles and before he recovered from these, cold settled upon his lungs which caused his death. His relatives and friends were with him during his illness and did all that could be done to make him comfortable.

I deeply sympathize with you in your heavy affliction and know you have the sympathies of all his late associates in arms.

Your son was a good, sober, and efficient soldier, and by his uniform kindness, modest deportment, and prompt attention to duty, had secured the respect and esteem of the members of his company.

Hoping an all-wise and just God will be to you a very present help in this your hour of trouble and affliction, and that you may be enabled to yield a willing submission to his decree, I am dear,

Yours truly,
J. W. Livingston.

P.S.

I send to you by Sergt. W. N. Gray who accompanies the body of your son, his pocketbook, clothes, and thirty one dollars and forty cents, money left with me.

J.W.L.

He was laid to rest in the family burying ground, known as the Morgan Burying ground, not much over a mile away from home.

The relatives mentioned could have been Bud, Nelse, and Green, for they were all close. They fought around Beaufort, Pocotaligo, and points nearby.

On January 18, 1862, not quite two months after Daniel Paine died, Green was dead. His body was not returned, there is no record of how or where he died. Just a notation on his record that his death occurred on that date. Nelse, who went in with him in the same company, never found out. All Confederate dead that could be located after the war was over, were moved to the National Cemetery in Beaufort, S. C. So many are unmarked, for dog-tags were not in use then as they are today for identification.

Nelse had told so many times of the fighting in that area. Once we stopped and visited the old breastworks at Pocotaligo where the Bolding boys had been. All that was there to show for the terrible fighting that had occurred were some earthen mounds, overgrown with trees and vines. A hallowed spot.

Adaline had two small children, so did Melissa. Both their husbands went. William Pilgrim was killed and was buried in an unknown grave. On record are several William Pilgrims. Which was her husband cannot be traced. William Collins was wounded twice. He was in Moore's Regiment, Co. B. A minie ball plowed through his skull, leaving a large scar. He had another ball in his foot that he carried to his grave.

J. Matt went to Pendleton and joined Co. I, Palmetto, Sharpshooters, under Capt. F. L. Garvin. This was Feb 21, 1863. His age is written wrong. Along with Matt went a Joseph T. Who he was, or where he came from, is unexplained. There are so many gaps along about this time in the Confederacy records. The two of them reenlisted when they got to Morristown, Tennessee. No explanation. J. Matt is listed killed, on state rolls at Petersburg, on Capt. Garvin's roll at Gettysburg. The War Department lists an unknown private named Bowling from Pickens District died of wounds in a hospital in Tennessee. After careful search of all Boldings of any spelling from Pickens District, it seems that this was Bud. He had enlisted for a year in Gregg's outfit, was released and when he went back with Matt to rejoin, the person writing the list put Joseph T. instead of John T. All records were handwritten, some almost illegible, and a check mark for Joseph T. being killed could easily have been read for J. Matt. All records in the state are photostatic copies and some have to be read with a magnifying glass. Since Jonathan's family could never find any trace of him, this one unexplained soldier must have been Bud. Matt came home un wounded.

In June 1863, Elizabeth J. and William Rowland Garrett were married. He was the son of Nip Garrett, and his brother, Aaron, was a witness. Jacob Chapman married them. Elizabeth was 16. William went to war and was in Co. B, S. C. Rifles. He came home safely.

Just before Christmas, on Dec 17, 1863, George Washington, called Wash, went to Pendleton and joined Co. C. Gregg's Regt. Nothing else is found of his record except that a year later he was discharged "upon the recommendation of the Medical Examining Board." (Dec. 29, 1864). No explanation.

Benjamin Marcus was left home to care for the old folks and his sisters. He was about to be taken away. His mother went by wagon to old Pickens to beg for him to be left. She had given so many. However, she washed and ironed his clothes and they were ready and waiting for his call when the word came it was over.

William Nelson, who went in at the beginning, seemed to have led a charmed life. Throughout the whole four awful years he was in the thick of battle. Never wounded, although knocked down by the impact of a ball that struck a tree against which he was resting. The ball singed the hair off the side of his head as it passed. He was a good soldier, an exceptional sharpshooter, the equivalent to the present day sniper.

News back home was hard to get. Months passed without the homefolks knowing the whereabouts of their loved ones. Nelse had a daguerreotype made in his private's uniform and sent home. He sent money when he could. A private's pay was $11.00 a month, with $4.00 for clothing allowance.

After the 12th Regiment got into Va. it was joined to Gregg's Regiment. In some old papers is found a list of battles which the Bolding boys living then participated. Also a verse of Dixie not usually heard. It goes like this:

*A blue cockade and a rusty gun
That's what made the Yankees run,
Look away, look away.
And though they're licked they can't forget
The Johnny Rebs that made them sweat.
Look away, look away,
Dixie Land.*

Confidence still was high in the South, although odds were against them. The year of 1864, the "creme-de creme" of all sharpshooters were organized into battalions to go in the forefront of Lee's army. May 4, 1864, at Spottsylvania. Major W. S. Dunlop, of Little Rock, Arkansas, was made Commander of the S. C. Battalion. It was composed of 200 of the best men. Veteran fighters, they were selected first by their own comrades, then by their officers, and finally through elimination in rigid tests. Ability, courage, training and leadership brought the best to the front. Nelse was made Sergeant of this Battalion. From that point on until April 9, 1865, he was with General Lee. He had many stories to tell of this year. One in particular was his feeling that General Lee personally saved his life. On a dark, stormy night, he and a comrade had orders to scout ahead for enemy sign. He had just turned away and was slipping out of camp when General Lee saw him and called out, "Bolding, come back here." There had just been word received by the General that the enemy had moved up closer, and had Nelse gone a little farther he would have walked into a trap.

All history books are full of accounts of Lee's Virginia campaigns, so the remnant of this Battalion saw action. "Remnant" is used, for many were killed, being always in the forefront of battle.

April 9, 1865, Nelse was captured between a road and a swampy, riverbank. He was unharmed, but held prisoner on the grounds of Appomattox Courthouse.

He was only a few feet away when General Lee rode up to surrender to General Grant. After the surrender, he said that the General came out, looked at the prisoners for a moment, slapping his gloves against his thigh. Not a dry eye in the crowd, and when he stepped down to go to his horse, they all gave a tremendous rebel yell, even if they were caught.

Because he had been captured before the surrender, Nelse was classified as a Prisoner of War and carried to Crown Point, Maryland, to a prison camp. Two months later, in July, he escaped and walked all the way back to S. C. His parents did not know if he were dead or alive.

Susan was plowing across the creek from the house when a dirty, ill-clad figure straggled up the road. His mother recognized him and screamed, "Nelse is home." Susan threw down the plowlines, jumped the creek and raced to the house. Nelse asked them not to touch him for he was covered with body lice and prison filth. Susan built a fire around the washpot, his mother brought clean clothing and he bathed and shaved in the smokehouse before he could greet his family. It was all over.

Dear Father:

I will send Mr. Burris a sack of salt if I can. It may be two weeks before I am able to go over to town. The people is leaving Charleston going up the country. They are badly scared here. It is powerful exciting times here now so I will come to a close for I am too sick to rite today. I will rite to you again in a few days. Nothing more, I only remain your son until death.

When this you see remember me, although many miles apart we be.

D.P. Bowling to Jonathan Bowling.

Dear Uncle,

I George P. Vaughn send my best respects to you all and I hope you will return same to me. I am well. Just got up. Me and William has had the measles. We have got well of them. We both are not able to do duty yet but I hope we will be soon. I hope when these few lines come to hand they will find you all well.

Nothing more only remains your friend until death.

G.P. Vaughn to Jonnithan Bowling.

Chapter Seven

AFTERMATH

The fighting ended, Bud, Paine, Green, and William Pilgrim gone, the rest of the family were back together. No money, few clothes, but they still had enough to eat. The North had done very little material damage to the Pea Ridge section. A few bands of marauders had come through, mostly searching for fresh horses.

One day Jonathan had gone to mill over on Twelve Mile. He carried a turn of corn to be ground and was riding his beautiful red saddle horse, very sleek and round. He had just ridden up when someone dashed by with the news that Yankees were coming. He knew they would take his horse so he jumped in the saddle and sped toward the riverbank where he hid under some overhanging vines and willows. When dark came, he slipped out, got his meal and went home. Years afterward Frank Looper, who was an old man then, asked Seagle Bolding if he remembered his grandfather. He then told about being at the mill that day, just a small boy, and how he would never forget the sight of Mr. Bolding, who was not very tall and almost as big around as he was high, on that fat, sleek horse, his legs sticking out and daylight showing between him and the saddle with every bound of the horse.

There was a little house below the spring and Adaline lived in it with her two children, Ella and Dink (real name, William Daniel Paine).

Matt was back with Nancy and the children. Bill Collins and Melissa lived in the neighborhood and Bill Garrett and Elizabeth, always called Liz, set up housekeeping. Mark (Marcus) married Bill Garrett's sister, Catherine, called Kate. Bailes Sargent, who had served in Moore's Regiment and was five years older than Susan, courted her and they were soon married. Wash married Nancy Nations, a sister to Jerry Nations (who a little later became Matt's son-in-law) and also a sister to Cynthia who married a brother of Bill and Kate Garrett Bolding, and that left Catherine and Nelse single.

Before long Catherine married a tall, handsome boy two years younger than herself, named Tyre Odell. They lived on with Jonathan and Rebecca, as did Wash for awhile.

Nelson (Nelse) took a job as farmhand for an elderly lady, Mrs. Elizabeth Garrett, widow of David Garrett, for a few years.

The District of Pickens was divided into counties in 1868. The part on the west side of Keowee River became Oconee, the east side kept the name of Pickens. Elihu Griffin gave some land east of Secona Church and a new courthouse was erected. A town quickly sprang up around it.

Dec. 6, 1868, Nelse married Rebecca Melinda Porter, a daughter of Samuel Gipson and Patsy Prince Porter, from near Holly Springs, several miles above the new Pickens. She also came from a family of sixteen children and had lost a brother, John, in the war. They moved in a little two room house near Jonathan and in 1870 joined Secona Baptist Church. The record reads that they came by letter, but does not say from where the letter was sent.

Thus all of Jonathan's children were married by 1870.

Out at old Twelve Mile Methodist Campground, the first week in October again became a time of gathering together for worship and social affairs. The first old church building had been torn away, and a new, square, white-painted structure built (mostly by Gideon Ellis).

Down below the church was a large brush arbor in a rectangular shape. Around it were tents and leantos for people to live in and some lived in their own covered wagons. Families brought all the children, the family milk cow and did cooking out in the open over fires. Stands sold lemonade, food, novelties, and one could even get a haircut and a shave.

Although it was a Methodist meeting, all denominations attended. Several sermons a day, sometimes two hours in length, lots of singing to the tune of an instrument called a tuning fork. Hundreds congregated there.

Granny Bolding was a very devout Christian lady, known as a shoutin' Methodist, it being in good taste then to give vent to feelings if one so desired. All of Jonathan's family attended these meetings, enjoying the reunion of friends not often seen.

The unrest of Reconstruction did not affect this upper section of the state. There were not many Negroes, and nothing to attract the Carpetbaggers who were in search of get-rich-quick, and although the affairs of the state such as high taxes, disorganization, and politics did affect them some, the Bolding brothers recently out of war stayed close to home. Down at Pendleton the Red Shirts were in action, and though Nelse made a trip or two to Columbia and was interested in Legislative affairs, he and the others were more interested in rebuilding and putting behind the bad things. Southerners they were, the very staunchest, rebels they had been for they had no other choice but to uphold their Southland, now they were ready to do their best to help unite.

They started a tradition of meeting each year on the Fourth of July for a celebration and picnic dinner. As the families grew larger, these became individual reunions, and to this day the family of Nelse has never missed a Fourth of July reunion with the exception of a few years in World War II due to gas rationing.

In 1874 Nelse bought 542 acres at the foot of Six Mile Mountain known as Maverick land. It was a part of the estate of Samuel Maverick, a wealthy landowner of Pendleton. History tells us that he and his son of the same name (who is honored by Texas history) owned so much land that they could travel to Texas and back on horseback and sleep each night on their own holdings. So many cattle had they until a lot never got branded. Cowboys called a stray unbranded animal a Maverick's until the word became accepted through common usage. Webster's Dictionary today gives the following definition: "maverick-n. -- an unbranded or motherless calf."

Nelse and his Rebecca cleared land and built up their home-site. He made shingles by hand and hauled them to Pendleton to make the payments. He had plenty of money. Years later there was a little trunk in the front attic that had a huge roll in it. It was the wrong kind to buy with -- it was Confederate money.

In 1876, Jonathan sold Wash and Nancy 50 acres of the homeplace for $50.00. Willington Roe and D. B. Madden were witnesses. Again Jonathan made his mark.

Son of a pioneer who settled in the backwoods of an undeveloped country, he never had a chance for much schooling.

A tax receipt reads:

October 31st, 1876.

Received of Jonothan Bowlin $6.40 taxes for 150 acres land.
W. R. Berry, County Treas., Pickens, S. C.

This is the last he ever paid.

Next year, 1877, a levy was placed against his land for $53.33. There was no explanation. Searching through files of The Pickens Sentinel, a local newspaper still in operation (founded 1871), the issues were filled with letters and articles concerning the outrageous taxation. This was not an easy time, nor can some things be understood.

An item in one of the Sentinels reads:

June 7, 1877.

Mr. W. N. Bowlin has shown us several heads of wheat from his field. They are as fine specimens as one would wish to see. He has several acres which will yield from 30 to 40 bushels per acre. Is there any other farmer who can beat this?

In 1879 Nelse sold Mark 286 acres of this first piece of land. Mark built a house and that was the homeplace for the rest of his life. He and Kate had six or seven children. Nelse and Rebecca had two at that time.

This same year, 1879, Jonathan took sick. He had an infected foot. Elford, Nelse's oldest son, recalls going to see his grandfather. He was lying out in the yard on a cot, under the shade of a big oak tree. It must have been in the summertime. Ed Garrett, Elizabeth's son, remembers going with his mother when his grandfather was dying. He distinctly recalls how his foot looked, three toes dark greenish, and the foot and leg swollen enormously. He was 73 years old. They buried him in the old burying ground with Paine and the little ones.

On Jan. 5th, 1880, his 150 acres were put up for sale by Joab Mauldin, Sheriff, because of the taxes that had been levied against him. The highest bidder was James E. Burroughs, who gave $150.00.

Thus the original 209 acres were gone, 50 to Wash and 150 to Mr. Burroughs. Unaccounted for were 9 acres. In further search, it was found that the phrase so commonly used in deeds, "the more or less," took care of it, but to whose benefit, Wash or Mr. Burroughs, we did not find.

Granny Rebecca moved from the old home to a little house Nelse built for her and Adaline, near Adaline's son, Dink.

Two notations in the Pickens Sentinel: (1882).

Sept. 10. Married by Rev. J. D. Wilson, Mr. Wm. F. Tompkins and Miss M. S. Bowlin.

(This was Wash's daughter, and they were both 16 years of age).

Sept. 21. Mr. W. N. Bowlin caught a gray fox last week after a chase from 4 o'clock a.m. to 4 o'clock p.m.

Gen. Garvin had died and the land that he owned next to Jonathan's place was put up for sale. Matt bought it.

On Jan. 22, 1881, Matt Bowlin sold 2 acres of this land to a committee from Prater's Creek Baptist Church for $18.00. He reserved the right to have a 12 foot right-of-way to the spring and to have a gate for cattle. The deacons who made up the committee were W. J. Gillespie, J. E. Gillespie, and J. E. Burroughs. Witnesses were Lemuel Reid and Reuben Parrott.

March 6, 1882, J. E. Burroughs deeded 3 more acres to the church "for the good-will of the church." He gave a thirty foot right-of-way to "Bowling spring, lying on the right of the road from Twelve Mile to Central."

Matt sold 200 acres of the property he had just bought to Mark. Nelse bought some more land, Bill and Liz Garrett bought northwest of Nelse on the Six Mile road, Susan and Bailes near the mountain, and Melissa and Bill Collins lived across Keowee river.

Catherine's husband had a brother, Jack, who lived near Carnesville, Ga. They moved out there.

The following obituary was in The Pickens Sentinel for April 5, 1883.

Mrs. Bowlin, a venerable old lady, relict of Jonathan Bowlin, died at her residence in the Six Mile section of the county last week. She leaves a large family of children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren to mourn her death.

Chapter Eight

AFTERGLOW

Now that Jonathan and Rebecca had passed away, Adaline moved in with Dink. A son of Ella's, Hamp, lived with him, too.

All of the others kept increasing until before long there were numerous relations. Samp Powell had a large family, and so did another sister of his and Rebecca's, Elvina, who had married Marshall Evatt. The community of Prater's (or Pea Ridge, if you like) was flourishing.

At Prater's Creek Baptist Church several of Jonathan and Rebecca's children and grandchildren became Baptists. Nelse and Rebecca had taken their letters out of Secona in 1875, so they joined there. Wash and Nancy, Mark and Kate. For Bill and Liz Garrett it was as near to Six Mile so they went there. Matt lived near the church but he continued to be a Methodist, and went back to Twelve Mile.

Nelse was always active in community affairs. A paper from his trunk reads:

Columbia, S. C. Oct. 30, 1882.

Wm. N. Bolding.

Sir: Hereby

You are appointed Deputy State Constable for the State in Pickens County, to serve thirty days from this date, unless your appointment is sooner revoked.

R. N. Richbourg,
Chief Constable.

The school situation still stood with the parents paying the teachers out of their own pockets. Nelse worked very hard for good schools, even boarding some of the teachers. One of these most remembered was Miss Kannie Zachary. There is an account of the closing of the last school she taught at Prater's in a copy of The Pickens Sentinel. An editorial on it reads:

An account of the closing exercises of Miss Zachary's school at Prater's will be found in another column. She has certainly done good work in that section. The educational progress of that community has been so decided and remarkable that we believe the citizenship of Prater's will see that the good work goes on. But this is not the only progress to be found among the hills of Prater's Creek. The farming interest is twenty five years ahead of what it was ten years ago. They have graded roads, terraced fields, fat horses, pretty women, and happy children.

While everyone in the community was not a child or grandchild of Jonathan Bolding, the greater part of all the population was, or was connected by marriage and as the community grew, so grew the family. (F. Van Clayton says the verse in the Bible, "Go forth and replenish the earth," was taken literally by the Boldings).

The brothers who had gone to Georgia, Buck and Dyson, had children to come back and visit. Dyson had a son, Alec, about the same age as Nelse. Buck had a flour mill and his family made and sold flour wholesale. Other relatives visited, some from Virginia. (Their names are forgotten).

The National Farmer's Alliance and Industrial Union was sort of a forerunner of the 4-H Club. A chapter was organized at Prater's. They had orders of business, badges, pledges and dues.

June 3rd was set aside for Confederate Reunion Day in Pickens. All the Boldings went. Parades, speeches, bands and dinners.

Mail, which had been so slow and uncertain in Jonathan's day, now was fast bringing the outside world nearer. Nelse corresponded with many of his old war buddies. His commander of whom he thought so much, Major W. S. Dunlop, lived in Little Rock, Arkansas. Major Dunlop wrote a book, "Lee's Sharpshooters," (out of print now) and in it he tells of Nelse. A very vivid account of the last year of the war. (A copy was found in the Caroliniana Library of the University of South Carolina).

Mail service in Jonathan's day had jumped from the first postage stamp in 1847 to Registered Mail in 1855, to Money Orders in 1864, set up in order to send money to soldiers during the war. Now there was Special Delivery in 1885, with Rural Free Delivery just around the corner in 1896.

Post-offices were kept by individuals in their homes and named for them, such as Hughes, S. C., Dalton, S. C., etc.

Some of the family went on to other states. Matt's eldest, William, went to Alabama, Adaline's Ella went to Georgia.

In 1886, Adaline died. She was buried in the old burying ground. Matt's Nancy had died and she was buried at Prater's. His daughter, Rebecca, was married, and his other son, Monroe, went to Alabama.

The Pickens Sentinel for March 24, 1887:

Mr. J. M. Bowlin expects to leave this week for Sand Mountain, Ala. He is a sober, industrious young man, and has already been quite successful. He certainly deserves it.

Matt married again, a woman much younger than he, named Martha Garner. They had a large family. Matt had a workshop out behind the house and made furniture. He had a beautiful orchard that was his pride and joy.

That year, 1887, Wash took bad sick. He had a lingering illness, some say he had typhoid and then developed pneumonia. The night he died, in late April, Ed Garrett sat up in the same room. Along toward morning Wash realized he was slipping away. He called Nancy to the bedside and asked her what she would do. Her reply was that she would do the best she could. He waited a moment, gave a long sigh, and said, "I'm afraid it'll be a poor do."

He was buried at Prater's Creek Churchyard, and he was only 43 years of age. He had six children. (A young son, 22, was to die a little later. He was engaged to be married).

For awhile Nancy and the children lived on at the old place and tried farming, and indeed it was a poor do. After a few years she gave it up and moved to Pelzer to work in a cotton mill. (Later, Wash's son, Julius, bought back Jonathan's old homeplace).

Melissa and Bill Collins lived over in Oconee County and had several children, one of whom was in very poor health and finally lost his mind. One morning, after a light snow-fall the night before, the family missed him and on searching found his barefoot tracks in the snow leading toward the river. They found him sitting on the bridge, so they carried him to a hospital and he died soon after.

Melissa died not long after. Her youngest child was 13. It was in 1890 and she was brought back to the family bury-ground to lie with Adaline and the rest. In the four years of the war, three had gone. Now in another four year period, three had gone. They were closing ranks.

Elizabeth was a born nurse. She went far and wide, never too busy to drop everything and go, although she had 14 babies of her own. She became a midwife and many a person in Pickens County has been ushered into this world by the small, gentle hands of Aunt Liz Garrett. (Now there is a greatgrandson carrying on her beloved work of tending the suffering, Dr. Sydney Garrett, of Pickens).

Mark was a small man, full of humor, with an infectious laugh and a real Southern drawl. The kind of person on whom a grandchild loved to pull a joke, such as tying an old dead hawk to a limb of a tree behind the barn and yelling, "hawk!" Melvin Bolding, Bill's boy did this, and Mark slipped in the barn, after cautioning them to be quiet, put the gun to a crack and fired away. He had as much fun as the rest when it tumbled to the ground and he saw it was an old long dead one.

Mark and Kate had a young teenage son, Tom, who bought a new shotgun. On the way home from town he was examining it, when it went off, kicking him in the abdomen and causing a hernia. Not long afterwards he died. They didn't know much about surgery then.

There was a lot of tragedy in the lives of Jonathan's family, as well as in other families. Down near Burroughs Mill Pond, lots of young people died with typhoid. Susan and Bailes had two children to die one day apart with it. Medical procedure was to starve a typhoid victim and so many died from lack of proper nourishment for strength. These two got hold of some sweet apples and ate them, they were so hungry. The little girl was 9, and the boy was 22. They are buried side by side at Prater's, almost in the edge of the field Susan hoed in when she was a little girl of 9.

Ella's son, Hamp, was out hunting one day and had lain down his gun. He reached to pull it to him and the trigger caught on a log. He was shot in the chest.

Catherine and Tyre Odell came back for a long visit to all the relatives. They had two little boys, and although Ed Garrett remembers playing with them and how they looked, he has forgotten their given names.

After they went back to Georgia it was heard that they had some more children, but eventually Catherine's family here lost trace of them. Tyre Odell came back to S. C. and they were separated. Why, if they ever re-united, or what became of them must be added to the mystery of Bud's family. With time and money, they could be traced. Genealogical Societies recommend people who do this, usually through the census.

Prater's school taught a well-rounded course of education for that day. McGuffey's and Swinton's Readers, Murray's English Grammar, Barnes' History, Webster's Speller (the little blue-back) were some of the books.

Pickens Sentinel, 1889.

"Mr. Editor. I had the pleasure of attending the closing exercises of the school at Prater's on the 10th inst., which was conducted by Miss Kannie Zachary. The examination began about 9 a.m. and continued till about 1 p.m. The exercises began with orthography, then reading, grammar, geography, &c. For want of time many of the branches of study were omitted, notwithstanding this fact it would be utterly impossible to crowd in more rigid and thorough work. The examination showed that great care and energy had been displayed to lay a broad and lasting foundation. At noon dinner was served on the campus. Here we beheld a table laden with mother earth's richest viands, to which everybody was cordially invited, and "the loaves and fishes" were distributed in abundance.

After dinner we were again summoned to the schoolhouse for further exercises. Messrs. J. E. Boggs, T. H. Galloway, J. D. Edens, J. R. Glazener, School Commissioner, and Rev. T. F. Marr were introduced and each in turn favored the audience with speeches fraught with meaning and pathos.

At the proper hour supper was prepared on the grounds when and where we enjoyed a feast which was taken from the many fragments of the baskets. At 7 p.m. we were called to witness the closing scene. The crowd was large during the day but now it seemed to grow until the house would not contain them. The evening exercises consisted of dialogues, tableaux, comical speeches, interspersed with rich and varied declamations by the students, all of which were rendered with perfect harmony and nicety. The music was excellently executed by Messrs. James Parsons and Ed Zachary, the former performing on the violin and the latter on the organ. The exercises closed about midnight. Miss Zachary then bade all an affectionate farewell. She has successfully accomplished a work that would reflect credit and honor on anyone. And now with the respect and regret of the entire community she turns her face toward the Old North State. May success and happiness attend her. A Visitor."

Christmas tree programmes were held at the school and community debates. These and the Church Services on Sunday were the means of social life, as well as religious and instructive.

Quilting parties, log-rollings, corn-shuckings, and new-ground burnings were work with pleasure added. People worked together and enjoyed themselves as they did. The country was wooded and fires were the terror of young and old and all turned out to fight them.

The Boldings were a singing people. What they lacked in quality, they made up for in volume.

One of Mark's sons made singing his life's work and studied in Virginia. Many a singing-school was taught by Professor McDuff Bolding. He went far and near singing for revivals. Protracted Meetings, as they were more commonly called then, were held in the summertime after crops were laid by and before harvest and cotton-picking time. They were truly revivals, both of inspiration and friendships, for that was also the visiting time.

Bill Collins had married again after Melissa's death, but when he died his children brought him back to the old burying ground to lie beside her. He was the last person to be buried in the old lonely spot. It was called the Morgan Burying Ground for Mr. Fate Morgan, who had given the land and lived nearby. His family, Jonathan's, and several more were buried there. Down the road a short way was the Burroughs Burying Ground. Churches were far apart, travel poor, no undertakers, homemade coffins for the older funerals, so people shared their burial spots and their services with sorrowing friends and loved ones. Death visited often--there were a lot of young men and women buried down in the Burroughs Burying Ground. A long time ago, infant mortality was a fearsome thing. There are so many little graves in all the old cemeteries.

By 1909 there was a need for a church closer to the mountain. The community had increased so rapidly that interest was aroused and action started. On the Sunday afternoon of November 29, 1909, a group met at the home of Elford and Alice Bolding and organized a Baptist church to be called Mt. View. The Rev. Joe Foster was called as pastor and Doc Parsons gave land between his house and Elford's. Ben Bolding had a saw mill and he gave most all the lumber. Others gave material, time, and labor. While it was being built, services were held in Elford's house. Members from Prater's Creek, Mile Creek, and Six Mile that lived nearby joined. In time almost all the Garretts and Boldings became members and Mt. View became the home church.

In 1912, during a revival in progress at Mt. View, Matt expressed a wish to be baptized into the Baptist faith. A granddaughter of his, Nora Nations, had joined and plans were made to baptize them together. Because Matt was so feeble, he was to be carried into the water in a chair. The Saturday night before the baptizing, Matt died. He was 77 years of age. They buried him at Prater's in sight of his home, beside Nancy, and seven years later, Martha was buried on the other side of him, having died of pneumonia at 58.

Elford was called to preach and ordained. Three years later, his only son, Leland, died of typhoid. He was getting ready to enter Furman University and was only 19 years of age.

Six Mile had a Baptist Academy and many of the Bolding relation were educated there and a good many became teachers.

Clemson Agricultural College was a young school and not far away. Calvin Garrett attended and was on the track team. He was one of the first, but many of the later generations received their education here in this school that was a dream of John C. Calhoun and his son-in-law, Thomas Clemson, both men that Jonathan knew.

As the Boldings and Garretts married, they were given lands by their fathers and to this day, the greatest part of all this section is still in the hands of the families. Farmers--Baptists--Democrats, they love the land.

The same year that Matt died, Susan lost her husband. He was buried at Flat Rock Baptist Church near Liberty (the Salubrity of Jonathan's day). She lived with her children, of which she had plenty to visit, being the mother of 15 babies. Everybody loved Aunt Suz.

Nelse was a true warrior, but not a bitter one. When World War I came on, he sent his youngest of seven sons, Tom, to fight. Every daily newspaper was carefully saved and reread. (Years after the war was over and Tom safely home, the front attic was filled with papers, all carefully stitched together by Rebecca. He not only read of the battles, he studied them).

Bill Garrett's eyesight was fast failing and he sat out on the yard in the sunlight to read. He was later to become totally blind.

Jonathan had been represented in the War Between the States and he was in this one. (Lester Sargent came back crippled, Susan's grandson).

Bill and Liz, Mark and Kate, Nelse and Rebecca, Nancy, and Susan were all left. They visited each other and talked of old times. They cautioned their children and children's children to lead Christian, upright lives. All were told of their Virginia ancestry, their English blood, but they were always told that a good heritage must be lived up to and after each was gone, the world should be a better place for their having lived in it.

When President Woodrow Wilson took the beautiful Edith Bolling to be his second bride, they were admonished never to forget that she was a distant relative.

Nelse was the greatest talker. He was well-known for his Confederate record and was visited by many a U.D.C. member to hear his stories of the War. He helped a large number fill out their papers needed to join.

He loved history and the Bible. He read his Bible daily and he read his Almanac daily. He watched the weather carefully and was almost as good a weather prophet as our newscasters of today. He said he studied the stars, the winds, and the clouds the four years he slept out in the woods, or in ditches, to see if he was going to be rained on or covered with snow.

The Bolding boys had been great hunters. Now Mark and Nelse sat on their front porches and listened to their dogs run foxes over on the mountain. Each dog was known by its voice. They knew each crevice on the steep slopes and they followed it all with glee, never stirring from their rockers. They were happy people.

Nelse loved to teach history to his grandchildren, especially of the Confederate War. He would take a shovel made from a little hand-made hoe, with the handle long enough to reach the fire without getting out of his chair, rake wood ashes out on the old stone hearth and then with his walking-stick, which he always had with him, he would draw lines in the ashes to represent lines of battle. He would describe each bit of fighting as he had seen it, always concluding the lesson with a little talk on the sorrow of war.

He told of camping on a riverbank with Yankees camped on the other side. The fighting had been halted. Soon their boys were singing. Someone noticed that those on the other shore were joining in, and so they were soon singing in harmony, mostly hymns. They sang on and on and the last song they sang together, the Northern boys sang the bass. The song was, "Shall We Gather at the River."

Next morning they resumed fighting. A scout had slipped across in the night and was "flushed" from cover near their camp. He jumped in the water and started swimming back amidst a hail of bullets. When our boys saw he was getting away, they stopped firing and were watching him. As he neared the other shore, his strength was giving out and he was about to go down. The Southern boys started cheering him on and he barely made it, finally crawling out on shore as they cheered.

Wash's Nancy had married again to a Mr. Wooten, but he had some children that objected to his remarriage so she came back to live with her children. In 1924 Nancy died and was buried by Wash at Prater's Creek Churchyard. Her oldest daughter had died in childbirth. Her next daughter had died, and only three of Wash and Nancy's children were living.

Samp Powell had lived to be a very old man and died at Capt. F. L. Garvin's place, Matt's commander in the war. Samp made guns as long as he was able, and he had died with cancer of the face. This had been a good many years before, but his children visited "Uncle Mark" and "Uncle Nelse," as they were called by everybody. The old folks had lots of company. Nelse and Rebecca seemed to attract visitors like those Daisy Flykillers, that she always had sitting around, drew flies.

Their old house was a rambling place. Really it was two houses joined together, with two stairs, two attics and wonderful places to play hide and seek. There was an old spinning wheel, cards, and lots of things to explore. One day Nelse took a little medal out of his trunk up there and gave it to Seagle's son, Edward. It was one he had won for sharpshooting. It became lost in time, but that same grandson went on to become a Major in World War II.

A covered walkway led to another building, the kitchen and well-room. There was an enormous stone fireplace out there. In the summer, when it was swept clean, it made a wonderful place for little girls to play house. If one looked up, they could see the sky. In the winter there was always a big, log fire, and a big, black iron pot in one corner with hog feed simmering. Smelled so good -- collards, turnips, cabbages, and corn meal stirred in. Nelse prided himself on his porkers, and they ate as good as any body.

The well-room had bunches of sage, sassafras, herbs, red, yellow, and purplish peppers, and popcorn hanging from its rafters. There was always milk cooling in a big wooden tub. It had a smell all its own.

There was always a big yellow cat, so fat he was lazy, and speckled hens pecking 'round the doorstep.

Nelse went out to feed the hens one September day and Rebecca found him there. He was laid to rest in Mt. View Churchyard. It was 1926 and he was 84 years old.

That was the year Kate died, too, and she lay up there not far from Nelse. Next year, Liz died. She had been sick a long time and seemed to give up. Had she lived a little longer she would have seen almost all of two of her sons' families wiped out in a tornado that struck Six Mile where she was resting in Eternal Sleep. Near her grave the townspeople buried her son, Nelse, his wife and three children. In the same grave lay Tillman's wife and three children (her baby boy). A lot of tragedy had swept through her life before and just after death. A son, Waddy, had been drowned in a Mississippi River flood. A grandchild, Horace, three years old, had fallen in a well and was drowned. A granddaughter, Pearl Garrett Stancill, had died in childbirth, besides all the little ones who died from illness. She had seen lots of suffering in her lifetime, some her own, and some of others, but her faith never wavered.

Mark could not live without Kate and just two years after he laid her away, he, too, died. He was buried beside her at Mt. View. Little Mark, as he was always called, lived at the old homeplace.

In 1930, Bill Garrett died. He would have been killed in the cyclone more than likely for he had been living with Nelse, his son, but was on a visit to another son's house, Jim, who had for years run Garrett's Store on Pea Ridge. He was laid to rest out at Six Mile by Liz and near the rest of his family.

They seemed to go very fast. Susan died next year and they carried her to Flat Rock to be by Bailes. The last born of Jonathan and Rebecca Powell Bolding, she had also been the last to join them in death.

Nelse's Rebecca was left. One day she made the remark that out of the combined families of her's and Nelse's, 16 each, 32 in all, she was the last living.

In June, 1933, she died and was buried in the black taffeta dress Beulah, her granddaughter, had made for her to wear to Nelse's funeral. She had pulled it off when she got home with the remark that she would wear it next to be buried in.

The last tie of the immediate family was broken when they laid her at Mt. View.

But others were left to carry on, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and so on until now the family is in its eighth generation.

Two of Nelse's sons are Baptist ministers. Some in the families of Mark, Wash, Susan, and Elizabeth are ministers, and several of the girls have become wives of ministers. All walks of life find descendants of this pioneer family. A few have not turned out so well, but compared to the rest, the ratio is very small.

World War II saw Jonathan's descendants again going to the defense of their beloved country, with some of them giving their all. Like Paine, some came back to their sorrowing loved ones—Earl Thomas, a descendant of Mark, who died in Germany, and Arthur Mauldin, one of Matt's, dying in Sicily. Another of Matt's descendants, Ila Nations' son, was lost at Pearl Harbor. Several others, and husbands of some of the descendants, lie in unknown graves like Bud, Green, and William Pilgrim. Many went, some as officers, more as privates, but all did their best, and later in the Korean conflict, also. Now in peacetime there are those doing their bit of service, too.

From California to Massachusetts, from the United States to Europe, the descendants of Jonathan and Rebecca Powell Bolding are to be found.

Up at Mt. View and down at Prater's Creek, the headstones tell a story.

Down at the old Morgan Burying Ground there are no headstones other than native rocks. On one of these is scratched some illegible letters, with the figures 1834. At the head of one grave stands a magnificent specimen of spruce pine, a native of the mountainous region above, and set there by some loving hand long years ago. The woods have grown up around the stones and a tangled undergrowth covers many of the graves.

There is an old joke about Pea Ridge that if you should meet a ghost on a dark night, just say, "How do you do, Mr. Bolding?" If he should fail to answer, say "I beg your pardon, Mr. Garrett." For he would have to belong to one or the other.

While that joke might be in bad taste, it is true that the spirit that hovers over that section of the county is one of a family that as a whole left behind a true American heritage, a Christian influence, and a brotherly love.

Chapter Nine

"MEMORIES ARE MADE OF THIS --"

Weathered grey shingles, boards, and logs -- reddish brown chimneys of rock and clay -- bluish white woodsmoke drifting up, up into bluer sky and whiter cloud.

Grass was something to fight with hoe and plow. Yards were cleanswept with brush brooms. Flowers grew in little beds -- violets, rose moss, pinks, snow-on-the-mountain, four-o'clocks, touch-me-nots, old maids, and bachelor buttons. Lilacs, crepe myrtles, roses, snowballs, hydrangeas, all spaced around the yards, with fig trees in chimney corners, and grape-arbors at the edges.

Plums grew in hog lots so nature did the feeding. Lye-hoppers behind smokehouses, beds of sage, catnip, and mint next to garden fences. Horse apples, Yates and Brandywines, open-stone peaches and little red Indian peaches for pickling, big yellow ones for canning, and near the trees the bee gums. In the rail-fence corners, the rabbit gums.

Strawberries on terraces, blackberries at field edges, and huckleberries in the woods.

Corn shuck brooms and white sand to scour with -- lye soap in gourds to wash with -- tallow to grease with --

The heavy roll of the thunder as it seemed to hit the mountain and bounce back. The smell of the dust as the first big drops splashed in it. Gulleys running wild with brick-red water and foam on top like soapsuds. The clean fresh smell after the storm and the sailing of shingle boats. Lightning-rods on houses.

Pine knots, fresh, rich splinters, green hickory logs, dry stovewood in neat stacks. Little slatted coops for the inevitable hen and biddies. King snakes that were protected so they in turn would protect the chickens from chicken snakes. Guns in racks over doors to be ready for the hawks and weasels. Hens fluffing dry dust in their feathers under the house. Nest eggs, real ones, glass ones, -- even old door knobs.

Potatoes bedded down in hills, corn in cribs, canned fruit, jelly, and dried apples in little closets under stairs. Sour krout, lye hominy, hams, shoulders, middlings, sausage, souse, cracklings, lard, and molasses barrels in smokehouses.

Goobers to parch, hickory nuts and walnuts to crack on the old stone hearths with little black flatirons. Roasted sweet potatoes in the ashes, chestnuts on the fire shovel, corn pone in the skillet.

Pound cake, tea cakes, chicken pie, squirrel stew, fist biscuits, fried chicken and bob sop, molasses stirred in red ham gravy, poke sallet.

Senna tea -- Yeager's Liniment -- hot ginger tea -- onion poultices --

Cat holes in doors, crickets on hearths, lanterns, straw hats, and bonnets hanging in outside hallways.

Button hooks, mustache cups, razor strops, Farmer's Almanac, Southern Cultivator, and shoe lasts.

Pieced quilts, handwoven coverlets and counterpanes, feather beds, and pallets to play on --

Finding dirtdaubers' nests in the old attics, calling up doodle-bugs under the floor, making toad-frog houses over bare feet in damp sand near old stone steps.

Big glass marbles that looked like striped candy, tops made from spools, little stick dolls made from smoothly whittled splinters with scraps pinned around for dresses, and match boxes for their trunks. Barlow knives to swap, kerosene balls of wound wrapping thread to light and throw on a dark night.

The smell of pears wrapped in paper, mellowing in dresser drawers, of a withered "plum-granny" (pomegranate), of green growing corn after a sudden summer shower when the sun came right back out, of penny royal in the pasture, of a just-cut watermelon, of coffee being ground, of ham frying, of pine splinters burning.

Lay-by time -- fodder-pulling time -- threshing time. Three or four tables of hungry dusty "thrashers" to feed. Straw stacks to slide down.

Corn-shuckings and a red ear a treasure. Candy pullings, sticky pop-corn balls with molasses oozing out between the fingers.

Asking a blessing before meals, big family Bibles with pictures, clippings, name cards, and locks of hair pressed between leaves. Little baby clothes laid away in chests with camphor balls.

The mourners bench at church, "Amazing Grace," all-day singings with dinner on the ground, Preachers for Sunday dinner, all-day workings for the unfortunate, sitting up nights with the sick.

Guineas pot-racking, lean hounds howling in the night, and roosters answering each other miles apart in the wee hours before dawn. Flicker of lantern-light and faint voices of possum hunters over on the mountain.

Bermuda grass was "Tom Bell" and Native Herb pills were "Reubens," after the salesmen who introduced them.

Sugar-tits made of butter and sugar tied in a little cloth to pacify babies. Starched petticoats and ruffled dresses made the baby need pacifying.

Palmetto fans, laprobes, plush-backed albums with tin-type pictures, parlor organs, big sea-shell doorstops to hold to the ear for the sound of the far off ocean.

Talk on front porches on summer nights with lightning-bugs flickering around and stars flickering up high. Horses champing in their stalls, calves calling their mamas, hogs grunting contentedly as they shifted their huge bulks to find a better position.

Talk around huge fireplaces on winter nights, with the flare of burning pine knots making strange shadows on the walls.

Woman-talk in the big kitchens as they stirred, churned, and chunked the big black iron ranges.

Man-talk out near the barns as they sat on fences and woodpiles and whittled.

Snatches of thoughts—smells—sounds—tastes—and ways that are the heartthrob of a family.

To those who remember—Nostalgia.

To those less fortunate—Treasure.

CHAPTER 10
FAMILY NAMES

January 10, 1957

December 31, 1985. First revision

This first revision is presented in hopes that future generations can see their lineage as it grew for 180 years. An alphabetical listing has been added to aid in locating a decendent in the proper family lineage. Should any name or date be overlooked or misspelled, it is not intentional.

Many thanks go to the many family members who were asked to contribute family information and to these individuals who worked diligently to compose this revision:

Mrs. Sam R. (Ruth) Bolding	Mrs. John (Lula) Roper
Mrs. George (Lola) Bell	Mrs. Roy (Patty) Watson
Mr. Melvin Watson	Mrs. Stan (Cindy) Scott

JONATHAN LEE BOLDING 1806-1879
